

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method in a computing environment is provided for configuring images for display on the Internet. The method includes selecting first and second component images and positioning the images according to a coordinate system to create a configured image. In the 5 preferred embodiment, the method of the present invention is utilized to configure products in an online purchasing environment.

204210 969500